The text is written on the verso of the fragment. The recto contains only small and unidentifiable traces of (cursive) writing, dating probably from the 2nd cent. A. D. (might also be later).

The Homer of the verso is written in large, upright, rather uneven letters. The style of the small fragment is not easy to date. Of N, the left vertical hasta, slightly sloping, crosses the middle bar. The A is angular, and the cross-bar seems to join the left hasta at the foot. The handwriting may be assigned to the 2nd cent. A. D.

The verses are found before in the following papyri texts: P. Oxy. 751 (vv. 30—34; 2nd/3rd cent. A. D.), P. Lond. 126 recto (4th/5th cent. A. D.), and P. Rein. ined. inv. 2144 (vv. 33—34; date? Cf. Paul Collart, Revue de philologie, t. 58, p. 328, No. 285).
